Dear Sir-I wish to give you this testimony, that you may know, and let others know, what Vegetine has done for me. About two years ago a small sore came on my leg; it soon became a large ulcer, so troublesome that I consulted the doctor, but I got no relief, growing worse from day to day. I suffered terribly; I could not rest day or night; I was so reduced my friends thought I would never recover; I consulted a doctor at Columbus. I followed his advice; it did to good. I can truly say I was discouraged. At this time I was looking over my newspaper; I saw your advertisement of Vegetine, the 'Great Blood Purifier' for cleansing the blood from all impurities, curing Humors, Ulcers &c. I said to my family, I will try some of the Vegetine. Before I had used the first bottle I began to feel better. I made up my mind I had got the right medicine at last. I could now sleep well at nights. I continued ORLEBRATED BRIDGE WATER FAMILY

This she swore to on the witness stand, testi fying that she had never loved the defendant, and had not willingly married him; and that he was and always had been repugnant to her; that her parents had all of the time known this, but they had persisted that she must marry him, and her mother had watched and guarded her to that end; that her letters to Green had bee written or dictated by her mother, and filled we expressions of affection that she could not volu VEGETINE.—The great success of the tarily make; that she had loved another may Vegetine as a cleanser and purifier of the blood and had pleaded against this marriage, and had prayed for death and contemplated destine tion rather than submit to it; and, finally, be ing wearied out and worn and distracted, had submitted herself an unwilling partner to the marriage ceremony, but did not consider in

Mrs. Spurlock, the mother of the girl ap pearing as a witness for her, fully corroborated this testimony in all essential particulars, as tounding the crowd of spectators by solemnly avowing in all its particularity her own part in this extraordinary business, and pleading a belief that she was doing right and securing her daughter's happiness and well being. The popular impression left by such testimony was in the highest degree unfavorable, and there is not heard anywhere any dissent from that impression. After the submission of this and other cor roborative evidence, the defence conscuted to a verdiet. Mr. Green testified that he had never known of the fac's testified to by the mother and daughter, and only wished to guard his own honor and reputation from a reproach that he did not merit. Accordingly, verdict was rendered annulling the marriage. and declaring it void-that is, that the mar riago had never existed; the parties were not in law husband and wife when they lived together, and that the child was not born in lawful wedlock. That such a decree should be desired seems to us as incredible as that a mother should have thought she was pursuing a righteous course in compelling her daughter to a marriage that she loathed.

STORY OF CHANCELLOR KENT.-The follow ing story is related of Chancellor Kent :- "The Chancellor and his wife were at once travelling in a one-horse carriage, long before the days of stage coaches, to visit friends who lived in the then almost inaccessible region of Canandaigua; they lost their way, night came on, and finding themselves on the wrong road, they stopped at a loghouse, and solicited entertain nent for the night. The good woman of the house made them welcome, gave them a homely supper, and explained that she did not expect her has band, who was chopping wood a few miles off, to come home till late. She then told her guests to take her bed in the corner, and that she and her husband would sleep in the 'chain ber,' and desiring the Chancellor to let her husband in on his return, she took a candle and climbed up a ladder through a trap door in the 'chamber." The guests then went to bed, but the Chancellor was uneasy. He observed to his wife 'Betsy' that the door did not look; that he feared the chopper, coming home in the dark, and finding another man in his bed, and apparently with his wife, would begin to 'chop. and that he thought he would get up and put a table against the door, so as to gain time for explanation while the good man was opening the door. He got up accordingly, and was in the act of pushing the table against the door. when a tail, stalwart figure, in red flunnel shire sleeves, with a big, black catskin cap upon his head, pushed open the door. He looked like a thunder cloud for an instant, but was me: with this address by the guest in his shire: 'My name is James Kent. I am Chancetter of the State of New York. The woman in that bed is my wife, Betsy. Your wife is upstuice. There is your supper.' The explanation, which was certainly not constructed on the theory of pleading in the Chancellor's court, made every thing harmonious.'

How IT FEELS .- That it is exceedingly unpleasant to be struck by lightning, the account which Mr. Wilson gives of the scene at the Gospel Tent, in Philadelphia, last Sunday, goes far to prove. "I was getting things ready for the school in the afternoon," he says. "There were only Mr. Couner and myself, of the adult members of our congregation, and seven or eight children who sought shelter from the rain. I was standing near the two little girls that were injured, and the entire party were around one of the tent poles. We had not the slightest warning. The first thing I knew was a terrible shock to my whole system, particularly to my head, and I was knocked senseless. When I came to benches. I bruised myself in putting out the fire, all the time feeling like a man in a dream, and when I came over home I asked my wife it my head was not broken open. That was the sensation I felt—that my head had been split into two parts." As Mr. Wilson spoke, his hands involuntarily sought the top of his head a proceeding he repeated several times during the conversation. "I do not think that the lightning set fire to the benches," he continued. "My theory is that it ran down the center pole, ignited the cilian the learner and these felting set ignited the oil in the lamps, and these falling set fire to the hay on the ground, which, in turn, burned the benches.
